INVESTOR SNAPSHOT

Income is solid and the entry price is falling, but this market has not grown in ten years. The case rests on yield and a good purchase price, not on capital growth.

- Yield — About 6.9% gross at the middle sale price; 7.9% if the latest Domain sale ($445k) is the right comparison.
- Growth — Docklands unit prices moved −0.6% a year over five years and −1.0% over ten. This building's recent sales show −2.55% a year over ten years.
- Competition — 7 of 21 homes for sale here are the same layout, and asking prices start at $370,000.
- Short stay — Estimated $60,836 a year, about $25,736 more than the lease costs, before running costs. Rules in the building are unknown.

HOW TO READ THIS REPORT

- Observed A recorded fact with a source and date, like a settled sale.
- Estimated A model's best guess, like Airbnb income. Treat it as a range.
- Unknown We do not have it. Shown as a hatched box, never as a zero.
- Conflict Two of our sources disagree. We show both.

About this report. Every figure carries its source and a certainty label. Figures marked Estimated are model output. Nothing here is a forecast or advice.

How sure are we? ● Medium

These are asking rents, not signed leases. The official figure is real leases but covers all 2-bed flats in Docklands, including newer and larger towers.

In plain English

Compared with the market, this unit is cheap to lease. That is good for a tenant or an operator. It may also mean the unit has something that makes it worth less, such as no car space or an older fit-out.

SOURCES realestate.com.au rentals via RapidAPI (11 Nov 2026). Homes Victoria Rental Report, moving annual median rent by suburb, June quarter 2026.

3

What is it worth?

Short answer. Similar apartments here sold for $445k to $532k in the past six months. The middle of the five we hold is $510,000.

Conflict Domain's building page shows a newer sale of the same layout, unit 413 at $445,000 on 9 Nov 2026, which is not in our realestate.com.au set and is lower than all five. Our middle price may be too high.

Has unit 310 itself sold recently?

No sale of this unit appears in the data window.

Next step: Check the title history at the land titles office if the last sale price matters.

What would a valuation model say?

No automated valuation is connected yet.

Next step: Connect a valuation source; it would sit beside these sales, never replace them.

How sure are we? Medium

Five settled sales plus one newer Domain sale, same building and layout. The small number of sales and the newer, lower sale keep this at medium.

In plain English

Treat $445k to $532k as the realistic range, and expect to pay toward the lower end. This building sells below the Docklands 2-bed median of $628k (87 recent sales).

SOURCES realestate.com.au sold listings via RapidAPI, 11 Nov 2026 (newest 150 Docklands sales only). Domain building page capture supplied by the report author, 11 Nov 2026.

B

The investment case

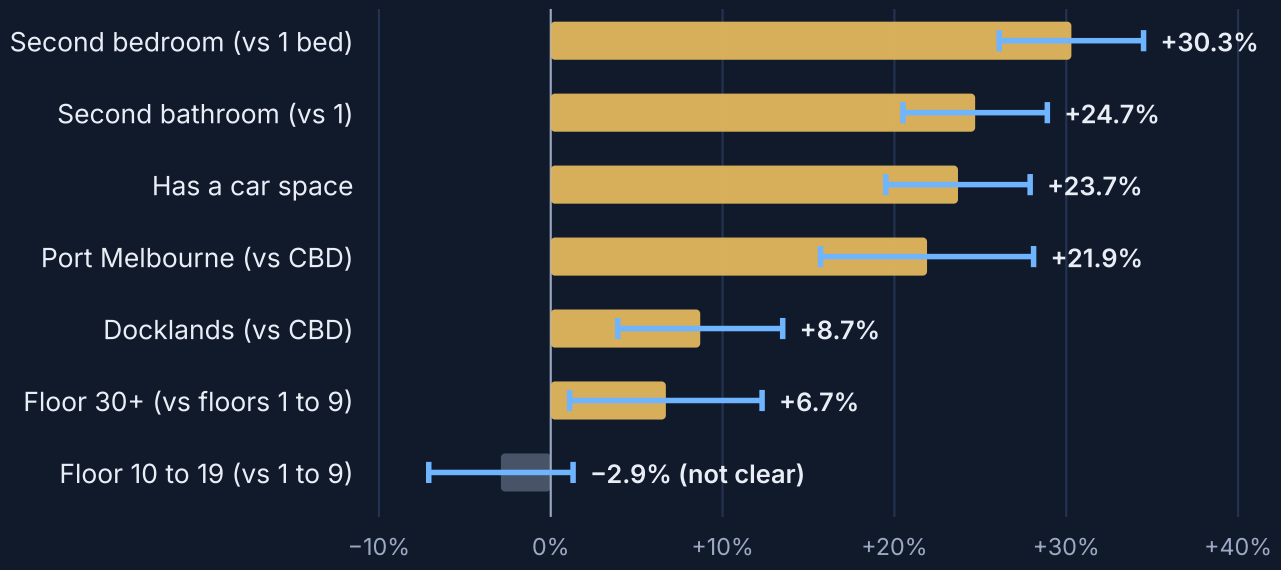

What moves the price, what you would earn, and what the alternative use is.

4

What makes this apartment worth more or less?

Short answer. A second bedroom, a second bathroom and a car space each add roughly a quarter to a third. The floor level barely matters. One in three homes for sale here has the same layout.

WHAT THE PRICE DEPENDS ON

● Estimated

Estimated from 599 apartment sales in six inner suburbs (R-squared 0.74). Bars show the effect with everything else equal; the line is the likely error. Grey means the effect is not clear. A typical gap of about 19% between predicted and actual price remains, so view, age and condition still matter.

How sure are we? ● Medium

The price effects are an estimate from a regression, not a valuation. Competing listings are asking prices, not sales.

In plain English

A seller of this layout has 6 direct rivals, several asking well below the last sale. For a buyer that is negotiating room. For an owner it is a reason to price sharply or add something the others lack.

5

What would the return be, and what if prices move?

Short answer. About 6.9% a year gross at today's asking rent. Below, what you would own after ten years at different growth rates.

Gross yield = a year of rent divided by the price. These rows are what-if scenarios, not evidence.

Owners corporation fees, levies and council rates: unknown

A net return without them would be invented, so the calculator asks you to enter them.

Next step: Request the owners corporation certificate from the agent.

How sure are we? Medium

The inputs are real (price, rent, history). The results are illustrations from numbers you choose. They leave out stamp duty, selling costs, tax and changes in rent. This is not a forecast.

In plain English

Over the past five years Docklands unit prices drifted down about half a percent a year while rents rose. At 0% growth the return comes almost entirely from rent, so the price you pay matters more than the market.

How sure are we? Medium

Two independent estimates agree within 2%, but AirDNA rates its own estimate low. Occupancy and nightly rate are model outputs, not bookings.

9

How does Docklands compare with nearby suburbs?

Short answer. Docklands has the highest official rent of the six suburbs we track, and one of the weakest five-year price records.

Two-bedroom apartments and units. Yield and Airbnb figures are indicative.

Forecasts: not included

We show history only. A forecast needs a licensed source and we have not chosen one.

Next step: Test a paid suburb forecast and compare it with these history figures.

Bedroom-matched yields: not available

Official prices are for all units together, while rents are for 1 and 2 bed flats.

Next step: Add a bedroom-level price source so yields compare like with like.

How sure are we? Medium

History is official. The ranking is a simple combination of two measures, not a recommendation. Yield mixes 1 and 2 bed rents with all-unit prices. Rent growth from 2021 starts at a COVID low.

In plain English

Docklands pays 6.3% but has not grown. Suburbs such as Frankston and Dandenong have grown +5% and +3% a year at lower yields. Which is better depends on whether you need income now or growth later.

13 What should you ask next?

Short answer. A short list for the agent, written for your situation.

1. Short stays: Does the owners corporation restrict short-term stays? Please send the current rules.
2. Costs: What are the annual owners corporation fees, and are any special levies or major works planned?
3. Price: A unit of this layout sold for $445k on 9 Nov 2026. What has the owner of unit 310 been offered?
4. Tenancy: If rented, what is the lease end date and the current rent?
5. Documents: Can you share the owners corporation certificate and the last two years of meeting minutes?
